Not illustrated. 1921 Excerpt: .of New York was not subjected to a dairymen s strike during the year 1920, it was considerably embarrassed because of the severe snowstorms which were very general through the eastern part of the country in the latter part of January and the early part of February. The severe storms on February 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th, amounting to a blizzard, greatly hampered the deliveries of milk in the City. Milk trains were delayed, in some instances, from 24 to 48 hours, and, consequently, all milk and milk products consigned to this City were from one to two days late in reaching the consumer. The country milk inspectors were likewise greatly handicapped in their work. Because of the extreme weather conditions, the time limits governing the sale of milk and milk products, after its production and pasteurization, were not enforced. The immense amounts of snow clogging the streets of the Greater City caused the larger milk companies to request the Department to take up the matter of clearing certain of these streets, with the Street Cleaning Department, in order to facilitate milk deliveries. Through the efforts of the Commissioner, and with the co-operation of the Street Cleaning Department, West Street and necessary crosstown streets leading to the several bridges and ferry approaches were promptly cleared of snow. It is true that, despite these herculean efforts, there was a partial milk famine; however, the Department promptly referred requests for milk from families having infants and children, or...
