Mr. Dimock makes his own cider, or superintends the making of it, which amounts to the same thing. He has three brands. That which I will call number one has, in my judgment, a little too much kick to be recognized as the official beverage of the members o the W. C. T. U. In other words, it has age and experience. I tried it and passed it by in favor of number three. This is so mild that if the baby s bottle were filled with it no harm to the infant could ensue. Number two is about half way between, and I can recommend it to gentle souls who like some kick but not too much. But in making all these brands, I strongly suspect that in some way he brings into play that wonderful Aladdin s lamp of his. It is also very possible that he possesses the receipt used by the gods on Mount Olympus in making their nectar, so celebrated in ancient history. Another night came. At eight o clock Mr. Dimock was telling an interesting story of the times when Henry Ward Beecher used to drive over to his Bowling Green offices in a little cart two or three times a week, to drive with him around the East Side and discuss the affairs of the day. On other nights, at various hours between 7:30 and 12:30, I listened to personal reminiscences of Jay...
