ROYAL SOCIETY TO THE STATE, AND THE RESPONSIBLE PUBLIC DUTIES WHICH REST PERMAN-ENTLY UPON THE SOCIETY. The end of our foundation is the knowledge of causes, and secret motions of things; and the enlarging of the bounds of human empire, to the effecting of all things possible. --F. Bacon (New Atlantis). From the Address delivered at the Anniversary Meeting on November 30, 1904. URING the last few years a very large amount, i ncreasing each year, of work outside the reading, discussion, and printing of papers, of a more or less public character, has been thrown upon the Royal Society--so large, indeed, as at present to tax the Society s powers to the utmost. A not inconsiderable part of this work has come from the initiation by the Society itself of new undertakings, but mainly it has consisted of assistance freely given, at their request, to different Departments of the Government on questions which require expert scientific knowledge, and which involves no small amount of labour on the part of the officers and staff, and much free sacrifice of time and energy from Fellows, in most cases living at a distance. There is little doubt that this largely increased amount of public work has arisen in part naturally from the greater scientific activity of the present day, but also, and to a greater extent, from the fuller recognition by the Government and the public of the need for scientific advice and direction in...
