

The Effect of the Point of View in Double Indemnity, Novel and Screenplay

By Kay Scheffler

GRIN Verlag. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 24 pages. Dimensions: 8.3in. x 5.8in. x 0.1in. Seminar paper from the year 2012 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Literature, grade: 1, 3, University of Wrzburg (Neuphilologisches Institut), course: Film Noir and Literature (Hauptseminar), language: English, comment: From 5. 1 onwards, the individual chapters are becoming briefer and less substantial. You fail to discuss which of the differences between novel and film are due to the different media and which are deliberate. Still, a very interesting analysis, with one major flaw: You ought to have addressed the flashback technique of the film and the resulting subjectivity of the version of events rendered within the flashbacks. Hence (only) 1. 3, abstract: In 1927, a woman named Ruth Snyder and a man named Judd Gray were sentenced to death by the electric chair, because they murdered the husband of Ruth, Albert Snyder. They murdered him for a 48, 000 life insurance with a double indemnity clause in it. Both of them also had an affair before they decided to murder Ruths husband. Judd Gray was a corset salesman. Present to the trial was James M. Cain, at that time working as...
