Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Cavalier, Vol. 2 of 3: A Romance The grey woman had her eye upon the troopers, as they mounted the rugged road, which passed over the crown of the moor; they attained the height, and in a few minutes their whole troop disappeared over the hill. She sat down to repose herself upon a stone which had fallen, and which being of great size, supported the remainder of the wall, whence it had detached. Aye, aye, said she, after a while, these reckless lads are the down on the heather - when would the Round-heads have offered a body a horn of liquor? By my blood and bones, ye may thirst and thirst to it, before ye get a draught of ought but the running stream, from their puritan consciences. Well, well, I have done my duty to gain the Baron; but were it to do again - Ye do change your hand; cried a voice above her. Reviews

It is in a single of my personal favorite ebook. Better than never, though I am quite late in starting reading this one. I am effortlessly getting a satisfaction of reading a published ebook.
