Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.THIS IS A SMALL COLLECTION OF SHORT STORIES AND POETRY. When we are born we are brought into this world as perfection, and it is only with time and age that we move further and further away from it. Ordinarily Stanley Laine is very structured and organized in his writing, typically applying the same techniques and practices that have worked well for him in completing his larger projects, but during the writing for his novel The End of the Line he found he was spending a lot of time engaged in intense reflection and material was coming forward that was not related to his novel, so in addition to the composing he was doing for the larger work, he also began doing some free-writing to try to capture these ideas swirling around in his mind. As Laine states, A few of the pieces included here were written for a specific purpose but I was getting overwhelmed with other things I wanted to say while still keeping focused on the material for my last novel which...
